

This message is in response to the possibility of the FCC implementing a proposal that would lessen the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law protections. This telephone privacy law has made my time at home much more pleasant. Before this law was implemented, my phone rang six to eight times a day from unwanted calls. The law has been so effective that now I might receive only 2 or 3 calls a day. I feel certain that this law has improved my quality of life at home because now when my phone rings it is usually someone I wish to speak with. Please do not preempt a law that has unburdened many people of annoying calls at all hours of the day and night.
